THE OLD CANOE.

BY ALBERT PIKE.

Where the rocks are gray and the shore is steep,

And the waters below look dark and deep.

Where the rugged pine, in its lonely pride,

Leans gloomily over the murky tide;

Where the weeds and the rushes are long and rank,

And the reeds grow thick on the winding bank,

Where the shadow is heavy the whole day through,

There lies at its moorings the old canoe.

The useless paddles are idly dropped,

Like a sea bird's wing that the storm has lopped,

And crossed on the ralling one o'er one,

Like the folded hands which the work is done,

While busily back and forth between,

The spider stretches his silvery screen,

And the solemn owl with dull 'too whoo,'

Settles down on the side of the old canoe.

The stern, half sunk in the slimy wave,

Rots slowly away in its living grave,

And the green moss creeps o'er its dull decay,

Hiding its mouldering dust away.

Like the hand that plants o'er the tomb a flower,

Or the ivy that mantles the falling tower,

With many a blossom of loveliest hue,

Springs up o'er the stern of the old canoe.

The currentless waters are dead and still,

But the twilight wind plays with the boat as it will,

And lazily in and out again,

It floats the length of the rusty chain:

Like the weary march of the hands of time,

That meet and part at the noonday chime,

And the shore is kissed at each turning new,

By the dripping bow of the old canoe.

Oh, many a time with ceaseless hand,

I have pushed it away from the pebbly strand,

And paddled it down where the stream runs quick.

And laughed as I leaned o'er its rocking side,

And looked below in the broken tide,

To see that the faces and boats were two

That were mirrored back from the old canoe.

But now as I lean o'er its crumbling side,

And look below in the sluggish tide,

The face that I see there is graver grown,

And the laugh that I hear is a sober tone;

The hands that lent to the light skiff wings,

But I love to think of the hours that sped,

As I rocked where the whirls their spray shed,

Ere the blossom waved or the green grass grew

O'er the mouldering stern of the old canoe.

A Kangaroo Hunt.

London Truth.

We reach the small wattle scrub, the guns to the number of thirteen being placed behind trees, at a distance of eighty or one hundred yards apart, in a line with No. 1. The wind in our face. Cartridge bags are unslung, guns unloaded and horses placed behind, out of sight and shot, and then all is quiet expectation. The quick, rifle-like crack of the stock-whip is our first alarm, heard in front, distant a mile or so; and eager faces peer from behind the trees. Then the shrill coo-e-e of the half-caste gin, and then the more civilized but less melodious outcry of the whites. Crack! crack! crack! and the sound of hoofs galloping at the extremities of the wings informs us that the kangaroos are breaking by the mounted wingmen stationed a little in advance and at each end of the line of guns. Thump! thump! thump! and a straggling "fyer" (half-grown) appears in front, bounding quietly along; presently he stops, sits upright, and licks his forearms, head, and ears outstretched, and evidently alarmed. Bang! bang! to my left startles him, and he bounds away in the direction of my neighbor's tree. I'll risk a shot; my chokebore ought to reach him; I fired apparently with little effect, excepting that he quickens his pace. Three hundred yards from me he suddenly stops, stands upright, waves to and fro, and falls on his back with a kick. This often occurs when shot in or about the region of the heart. A few scattered shots along the line increase excitement. But hark now to the thumping in front! a few seconds, and the vanguard of the marsupials appear on the crest of the opposite ridge. And now the cracking of whips and shouting and coo-e-eing are more plainly heard; on they come at their quickest and longest jumps; from the whole length of the line a perfect hail of shots greet them.

The dead and dying now lie scattered in every direction, the wounded making frantic efforts to get away, leaping and bounding, and rolling on every side tearing with their teeth at their shattered limbs, often succeeding in escaping when the latter are evenly broken. A short lull, and again the view in front appears to be a jumping, bounding animal mass; their main body is upon us. Our guns are now hot, our cartridges greatly diminished. A more furious firing then ever an interminable banging for a few minutes; the kangaroos frantically leaping before and behind, almost touching you, terrified and bewildered; the guns in front of them, laughing, shouting and excited beaters behind, their yelling and coo-e-eing waxing louder and quicker as they approach nearer and nearer to the scene of slaughter. Soon they have run that terrible gauntlet, leaving two hundred of their companions as pioneers to those happier feeding grounds, where they trust to be more hunted. A blow on the head dispatches the wounded, and the scalps are quickly taken. I am quite bewildered as to which are mine and which my neighbors (a black fellow) He says "It's all right." I suggest the old man kangaroo he is butchering might possibly be mine. He grins. "Broke his arm only, sir. I dropped him. Didn't you see him roll over? Why he jumped as high as—," Bang! Hurrah! Another scalp, a joey joey is a young kangaroo which lay concealed in its mother's pouch and which the sight of the black fellow had startled. This one makes twenty-four scalps for forty-one cartridges. "I say, Jacky how many you shot?" Forty, sir." I mentally vow I will better my mark my next dead ones. As soon as all the scalps are secured—sometimes after an exciting chase, for another cartridge would help to spoil our average—we congregate around our leader anxious to know the result of our first drive. We have 245 scalps and 350 cartridges expended. Bad; but some are new at the work.

DAILY EVENING BULLETIN.

MONDAY EVENING, DEC. 5, 1881.

The Street Railroad.

The article on the subject of a street railroad in Maysville, published in this paper several days, we are pleased to observe its exciting new interest in that enterprise. A street railway here would certainly be more than a luxury—a twelve months use of it would establish it as necessity, and many who now look upon the scheme as chimerical, would wonder how, for so long a time we did without it. Our men of capital, while they are liberal enough when asked to give outright are slow to take hold of public improvements with a view to making money out of them, from a sensitive fear of the criticism, that unfortunately, nearly always follows remunerative investment in such schemes. It is therefore, very probable that if a street railway is ever built here it will have to be by a general effort of the people and we believe any properly organized company will meet with their hearty co-operation.

We will assume that our city council would give to a railway company, the desired right of way through the streets of the city. In the greater part of the town there is naturally but one route to take. Going East, when Wall street is reached the question arises as to the best and most economical course to take from there to the bridge. Some persons contend that straight through Second street would be best, while others say that the street is too narrow to allow the space needed for street cars. These latter think it would be better to go up Wall street to Third and out that thoroughfare to Bridge street. But which ever route is chosen, it is certain no other road can be built and there will be no opposition schemes.

The railroad would have to be about three miles long and it would take about $15,000 to construct and equip it, say with three cars, and single teams of mules. Three cars would allow trips to be made every twenty minutes each way, or three an hour—each car making the round trip of six miles in sixty minutes. This furnishes quick and prompt transfer, and a time table could be arranged so that the public would know the precise time of arrival and departure of the cars.

On this basis the expenses of the line would be as follows:

3 drivers at $1.50 a day.....	$4 50
12 mules at 25c. a day.....	3 00
2 hostlers at 1.50 a day.....	3 00
Wear and cost of maintenance.....	1 00
Interest on investment.....	3 00
Taxes and extras.....	1 00

Total daily outlay.....$16 50

To cover this daily cost it would require that three hundred and thirty people should pay a fare of 5 cents. This would be one hundred and ten persons to each car, say in fourteen hours, or four persons to each car every trip, from one end of the line to the other. This is a rough estimate of the cost of maintaining the road, and from it our readers can see what the public will have to do to make it a success. Would the cars ever run from one end of the city to the other without carrying at least four passengers? We think not. If that number could be counted upon it would pay the daily expenses and all over that would be profit.

These remarks are made with a view of arousing further interest in the enterprise and while we do not vouch for the absolute accuracy of the figures we give they are believed to be approximately correct. We will add that the charter for the enterprise is already provided and is at the service of any company that desires to make use of it in good faith.

The ninth district of Kentucky, Collector Blaine, Maysville, is in excellent condition. Character of employees very good. Only two small matters in the daily records to criticize. Grade of office No. 1.

THE Bourbon Sun suggests as a means of suppressing lawlessness to a certain extent the adoption throughout the State of the old "patrol" system. In view of the fact that much of the minor crime occurring here is done under the cover of darkness, the suggestion is a most sensible one and is worthy of serious consideration.

DAILY EVENING BULLETIN.

MONDAY EVENING, DEC. 5 1881.

WHEN first that little road began
To break dirt for its track,
In certain railroad schemer's eyes
Everything was black.
But, now that rumor whispers tricks—
The selling out of right,
They're putting in their biggest ticks
To prove that black is white.

To Business Men.

The success of the BULLETIN as a daily newspaper, we are pleased to say, has far exceeded our most sanguine expectations. A little more than a week old the EVENING BULLETIN is already in favor with more than three hundred of the best people in Maysville, the suburbs and at Aberdeen, and is read every day at their firesides. It is welcomed in the households of men of both political parties for the reason that it is more of a news medium than it is a political journal. Its wide circulation, therefore, in Maysville and the territory tributary, makes it a most valuable vehicle for business announcements, which we respectfully invite to our columns. Our rates of advertising are very low, being less than one-half the charge for the same number of publications in the weekly, and where it is desired to make use of both papers a liberal discount from our regular rates will be given. We assure you that the DAILY BULLETIN affords most excellent facilities for reaching the public ear.

The river continues to rise.

THOMAS A. MITCHELL has been appointed store-keeper in this, the Ninth Revenue District.

It is a fact that the little "Clipper" is more frequently on time in her arrivals than the 8:15 train on the Kentucky Central.

The river is rising at Pittsburg, and there are is a some prospect of a small run of coal being made.

MR. THOMAS ORIDGE, a well know and estimable citizen died this morning after a long illness. A good man has passed away.

LICENSE to marry was granted Saturday by the clerk of the county court to John Paul and Miss Susan Prather, both of this county.

The steamers Mount Clare and H. E. Pierpont, passed up yesterday evening with empties. The latter took several from this place.

The Sunday Morning Call, circulated for the first time yesterday, is a remarkably neat little journal. It is bright, newsy, and worth all the publishers ask for it. May it live and flourish.

MARSHAL HEFLIN passed down the river Sunday on his way to Covington with a lot of moonshiners lately arrested in the mountains. Including the witnesses there were one hundred and five persons in the party.

MR. LABAN EVANS, a valued citizen of Huntington township, Brown County, O., died last Thursday after a short sickness of malarial fever. He will be remembered by the Maysville military, as their fifer on the trip to Yorktown.

A LETTER to the BULLETIN from Mr. Thomas Skinner, of Falls City, Nebraska, gives an encouraging account of the agricultural prospects in that state. The letter concludes with the following kind reference to the BULLETIN: "Your paper is a most welcome visitor from our old home, and we wish it continued prosperity."

FIFTY-NINTH

Annual Meeting of the Mason County Bible Society.

The Mason County Bible Society, organized in 1823, held its fifty-ninth annual meeting, in this city, at Third street M. E. Church, on Sunday evening, President Barbour, presiding. The meeting began with an anthem by the choir, followed by reading of the scriptures by Rev. M. D. Reynolds and prayer by Rev. A. R. Kennedy.

The following officers were elected to serve the ensuing year:

President—James Barbour.
Secretary—W. C. Sadler.
Treasurer and Depository—James Smith.
Managers—D. E. Roberts, C. J. Hall, A. T. Cox, J. E. Blaine, L. W. Robertson, J. D. Buer and E. Myall.

The annual contribution to the American Bible Society, which has not yet been fully collected, will be not less than seventy-five dollars.

After the business of the meeting had been transacted addresses were delivered by Rev. W. D. Powers, of the Episcopal Church, and Rev. E. L. Sanders, of the M. E. Church, and by President James Barbour, which were listened to with great interest by the large and appreciative audience present. At the conclusion of the addresses Mr. D. E. Roberts was elected a life member of the American Bible Society.

Swift and Sure Combination.

This well-known and only popular dramatic troupe will appear at Washington Opera House next Saturday evening in the great sensational drama, "Swift and Sure," which has been enthusiastically received all over the country. The following notice is from the Philadelphia Times of October 5th:

Langdon & Allison's "Swift and Sure" Combination has evidently made a hit with the patrons of the National Theater. We sat through the performance last evening and have seldom seen a more delighted audience. Every act in the Olio was cheered until the performers were too tired to respond, and as for the drama there was either a round of applause or a shout of laughter from the rise to the fall of the curtain.

Coming Back.

The New England Opera Company, whose presentation of the comic opera "Mascot" so delighted their audience here last Thursday evening, we are pleased to announce, have been engaged by some of our enterprising citizens to return and repeat the entertainment. Accordingly the company will appear at the Opera House next Wednesday evening. The general verdict is that it is the best troupe that has visited Maysville for years. As there will be a rush for seats we advise our readers to secure them early. They may be had at Harry Taylor's News Depot.

Do you take the DAILY BULLETIN?

Coal sells at twelve cents.

No hogs were killed at the porkhouse Saturday.

Secure your seats for the Mascot entertainment at the opera house, next Wednesday evening.

Our "little and loud" contemporary is meeting with success. Morris deserves all the good luck that may come to him.

From information received that the Morning Mail will make its appearance here some time this week. We presume.

ELDER JOHN BROOKS, of Mexico, Mo. will preach at the Christian Church to-night at seven o'clock. The public is invited.

The County Democratic Convention to select delegates to the State Convention to meet at Frankfort January 11th, is assembling as we go to press.

The Seat of Emotion.

Leigh Hunt.

I must give here as my opinion, founded on what I observed, that lips become more or less contracted in the course of years, in proportion as they are accustomed to express good humor and generosity, or peevishness and a contracted mind. Remark the effect which a moment of ill-humor and grudgingness has upon the lips, and judge what may be expected from an habitual series of such moments. Remark and reverse, and make a similar judgement. The mouth is the frank part of the face; it can the least conceal its sensations.

We can hide neither ill-temper with it, nor good; we may affect what we please, but affectation will not help us. In a wrong cause it will only make our observers repent the endeavor to impose upon them. The mouth is the seat of one class of emotions, as the eyes are of another; or rather, it expresses the same emotions, but in greater detail and with more irrepressible tendency to be in motion. It is the region of smiles and smiles and of trembling tenderness, of a sharp sorrow, of a full breathing joy, of candor, of reserve, of a carking care, of a liberal sympathy.

The Ninety-five Cent Game.

Poughkeepsie Eagle.

A sharper is on his way up the Hudson with a 'ninety-five cent game.' His method of doing business is to enter a store and ask for five cents' worth of some article; on receiving it tenders a two-dollar bill in payment; the change given him by the storekeeper generally consisting of a dollar bill or silver pieces and ninety-five cents in small coin, he places the dollar in his pocket, and suddenly finding a five cent piece in that receptacle, apologizes for making trouble in getting the change, and, placing the five cents on the ninety-five cents, pushes it toward the storekeeper, asking for a dollar bill, saying he dislikes to carry so much silver. Upon the unsuspecting storekeeper placing a dollar on the counter, the sharper engages him in talking until he can place both the change and the bill together, when he coolly asks the victim to exchange the $2 on the counter for the two-dollar bill he had originally given him.
